Mtx thunder elite 1501d amp manual instructions

Written By Nick, Albuquerque, NM If you can afford L7's you won't be dissapointed, they are incredible. It also comes with a bass remote but unti i reconfigure my system and get a better HU, the bass is overpowering enough without it. Powering a single 12" W6v2 pre enclosed sub, the bass is smooth and deep, although it all too easily overpowers my front coaxials powered by a JLA 450/4 and i had a hard time to balance that out without turning sub outputs too low but that is likely due to the install itself and/or adjustments and not anything directly of the amp. Have not gotten around to replacing OEM Alt. I also really liked its extra 4 guage capable power and ground distrobution intended for use with a cap, but made my wiring easier to use them for powering another amp rather than use a seperate distrobution block. The "demo" mode looks cooler as it changes through the spectrum constantly however it wont shut off unless done manually and is for dealer display only unfortunately. I never used the smart engage power on/off and i don't even know how to use it, so i opted for the remote wire. LOL's out to ..... Obviously intended for looks and to be displayed on a rack and certainly not under your seat or in an area where cargo is taken in and out. Overall its a rock solid performer and satisfied enough to say that i'll be keeping this amp for years to come. I prefer rugged housings where i don't feel like i'm holding fragile glass when handling. Though i can say it has never dimmed my lights and so far no issues there, though i'm sure it will or could still kill the alternator eventually, but it certainly appears to be pretty efficient and gets just mildly warm to the touch on long hauls in the summer so no doubt the XTC cooling works well however i never understood why amp makers don't adopt current high end computer CPU closed loop liquid cooling trends. The adjustable color spectrum changes through a range of colors seen around the top area of the amp and around the controls to match color schemes. The problem i find is of course its very prone to finger smudges and scratches and is why it needs to be mounted in a safe area away from cargo. Personally i don't find it useful for anything other than helping me see the adjustments better. If you can give them a lot of power they will beat any other sub hands down. All my buddies who have them have blown out their windows, I'm afraid to turn mine up that loud. At low gain and no bass boost it is so loud it is actually hard to breathe.
